

Concentration of ownership of local media is a pernicious trend in America. One of the first things they do is combine news and opinion departments. This reduces the variety of information available to the public.